not sincere in its efforts to obtain bimetallism.

In the course of his speech he made a sharp distinction between a Republican and a silver Republican, saying that a Republican could not be a silver man any more than he could be a Democrat, nor could a silver man be a Bepublican. The tariff was not an issue, but bimetallism was the only issue, and if they could vote for Bryan in '96, when protection was threatened, he failed to see why they could not vote for silver in '96, when protection was not threatened. In closing he dwelt at some length on the pledges made by the Republicans and silver Republicans, and the pledges they had authorized him to make. He demanded that these Republicans all stand true to the cause of silver, even as he had done.

We hear the expression used constantly.

So much so that in nine cases out of ten it really has no significance in connection with facts.
